Research program: From the point of view of birational algebraic geometry, and in particular of the so-called Minimal Model Program (MMP for short), complex projective varieties can be decomposed into three fundamental classes: minimal varieties of general type, K-trivial varieties, and Fano varieties; these three classes are characterized by the positivity/nullity/negativity of the curvature of the canonical divisor of X. An interesting question is to identify natural conditions and invariants such that, once fixed, the varieties in each of the three building blocks are parameterized in a finite number of families of deformations - a property called boundedness. The project proposes to combine complementary expertise to address boundedness problems in algebraic geometry, with particular attention to three main directions:

1. the study of the volume and numerical properties of foliated manifolds, with the aim of establishing new boundedness results;
2. understanding the structure of singularities in foliated surfaces and the construction of moduli spaces;
3. the analysis of boundedness for K-trivial manifolds, in particular those of Calabi–Yau type, including the systematic study of moduli spaces and related wall-crossing phenomena.

An innovative part of the project also concerns the extension of these issues to the context of positive characteristic geometry, where fundamental questions remain open.

Useful information for candidates submitting a brief proposal for the development of the project line or research program:

Candidates are required to submit a brief proposal for the development of a research program (max 3 pages), highlighting their scientific interests, the problems they intend to study, their previous experience in the field of research covered by the call for applications, and the relevance of the proposed research topics.
